

Latest Federal Reserve meeting sees US rates on hold

The US Federal Reserve decided to keep interest rates on hold on Wednesday 19th. This was a reaction to inflation remaining flat with that number remaining slightly elevated in certain areas which, all in all, did not prompt the FED to need to reduce the US rate of interest. The FED chairman, Jay Powell was keen to stress the US was in no rush to lower rates but he did parse this comment by saying the economic outlook for the US remained uncertain off the back of the current administrations trade policies.

Want to discuss how this impacts your clients?

Contact Your Relationship Manager

This document is not intended in isolation as an offer or solicitation or recommendation to use or invest in any of the services or products mentioned herein. Investors should be aware that the value of the portfolio and the income from it can go down as well as up so you may get back less than you invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future returns. The value of investments denominated in foreign currency may fall as a result of exchange rate movements. The investments and services referred to in this document may not be suitable for all investors and, if in doubt, you should seek qualified independent financial advice. Any opinions, expectations and projections within this note are those of TAM Asset Management International Limited, represent only one possible outcome and do not constitute investment advice.

TAM Asset Management International Limited is regulated by the Financial Services Commission of Mauritius and is an authorised Financial Services Provider regulated by the South African Financial Service Conduct Authority.